Water Safety Advisory gauge

Greg Walsh is the new city of Salem Emergency Preparedness Manager. Mr. Walsh gave us information on the current water advisory situation in the city of Salem. He informed us that the city is being extra careful before calling the advisory off, having gone through several false starts declaring the water safe for everyone including young children and older adults. The City of Salem has purchased an ELISA (enzyme-linked immunosorbent assay) testing system, as part of its efforts to ensure consistently clean drinking water for the Salem community. As of June 27, the ELISA testing method is up and running.

Mr. Walsh also talked about the The Community Emergency Response Team (CERT) program which trains volunteers to assist the community in the event of emergencies and natural disasters such as earthquakes.
