Join an Alzheimer's Research Study

On April 13th, our program was presented by Maria Garcia, a Patient Educator for Care Access.

Before new medications are made available to the public, they must undergo a rigorous scientific testing process. Only the few that can continue to accumulate evidence of their safety and efficacy throughout the entire process, which starts in the laboratory and proceeds up through clinical trials with patient volunteers, are allowed to continue on the path to FDA approval.

Want to understand your risk for developing Alzheimer's Disease? Care Access is looking for volunteers to participate in a preclinical Alzheimer's research study sponsored by Eli Lilly & Company. The study is open to adults ages 55 to 80, who can read, see and hear so that they can complete a memory test and who have not been diagnosed with any cognitive impairment conditions such as Dementia, Alzheimer's or other conditions that can affect memory and thinking skills.

All visits will be remote except for infusions, lab work, scans and other testing. Study participants will receive study-related care at no cost and eligible participants will receive compensation for their time and travel expenses.

Viner Scholars Foundation Provides Scholarships

Our program on April 20th was presented by Cliff & Nicki Viner, representing the Eda & Cliff Viner Community Scholarship program that provides South Palm Beach County High School students with four year scholarships to colleges and universities in the State of Florida public educational system.

The requirements to apply for a scholarship are as follows: High school SENIOR who attends one of their partner community high schools in Boca Raton and Delray Beach; have a non-weighted cumulative GPA of 3.0 or above; Demonstrates Financial need; have 100 + Hours of Community Service and Must Be Attending Florida Public College or University.

In addition to the 4 year scholarship, the foundation has established a mentoring program. All students are assigned a mentor to guide and support them through their college experience. In addition, a network of social service agencies and professional organizations are available to assist students with critical needs that may arise during their college years.

This is a Last Dollar scholarship - students must access all other potential sources of financial aid first.

The scholarship will cover tuition and room & board expenses that are not already covered by other financial aid, up to $10k per year, per student.

Building South Florida's Tech Hub

Our program on April 27th was a presentation by Nikki Cabus, the CEO of South Florida Tech Hub.

South Florida Tech Hub is a non-profit membership association that is Building South Florida's Tech Hub. As a regional trade association, Tech Hub promotes industry growth by working with business groups, educational institutions, and government entities to support the goals of member companies. The core focus is fixed on producing long-term economic impact by attracting new business, supporting startups, and building the talent pool.

Launched in 2015, the Foundation's first program was establishing the 1909 Workspace & Accelerator in West Palm Beach, in collaboration with the Knight Foundation, Community Foundation, and local government partners. The organization became an independent non-profit organization in 2020. In 2021, Code Palm Beach merged with the Foundation. Started in 2016 as a collaborative effort with Tech Hub's team, it operated as an independent non-profit organization focused on K-12 STEM Education throughout the Palm Beaches.

The Foundation also offers fiscal sponsorship to mission-aligned initiatives in South Florida, while also building new projects in partnership with grant-making partners.

With a scope of services that meet the needs of a wide range of industry professionals, from corporate CEO's to freelance developers, they believe in fostering the industry through a unified and holistic approach. For more information, go to <https://TechHubSouthFlorida.org>.

PUBLIC SERVICE ANNOUNCEMENT

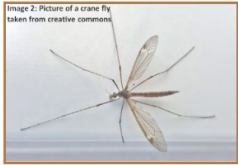

Florida Mosquito Awareness Week

Florida Mosquito Awareness Week was April 17-23, 2022. Throughout Florida, there are over 80 species of mosquitoes which vary in diversity of size, color, and behavior. This article provides information on mosquito identification and features that can distinguish them from other unrelated insects.

A primary feature that separates all mosquitoes from most other insects is the shape of its mouthparts, more commonly called a proboscis (see Image 1). The proboscis is more than a hollow straw and contains many parts, like a toolset for collecting nectar and blood meals. Though other flies may have a proboscis, they are usually much shorter than that of a mosquito. A second characteristic unique to mosquitoes are scales that cover their exterior. These scales contribute to the colorful patterns on the mosquito's body and are essential in identification by entomologists.

The most common insect often confused with mosquitoes are crane flies (also called mosquito hawks, see Image 2). These flies are attracted to light and may end up in your home at night. They are often much bigger than Florida's largest mosquito and are mistakenly called "giant mosquitoes". However, crane flies do not bite people or animals. In fact, many crane flies have greatly reduced mouthparts and will never feed as adults.

Another fly confused with the mosquito are midges. Non-biting midges (blind mosquitoes, see Image 3) vary greatly in size and can look identical to mosquitoes to the untrained eye. The key missing characteristic is the proboscis. Non-biting midges do not take blood meals and have reduced mouthparts. On the other hand, biting midges (see Image 4) are all extremely small and are commonly called "gnats" or "no-see-ums". Though there are some mosquitoes which are close in size and biting midges do blood feed, they can be differentiated by their much smaller mouthparts.

Whether you are seeing crane flies, midges, or actual mosquitoes, it is important to remove standing water where mosquitoes lay their eggs. You can help prevent them in your yard by getting rid of or draining all objects that may retain stagnant water. In addition, you and your family should always use repellents registered with the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA). You can find out more at : <https://www.fdacs.gov/Business-Services/Mosquito-Control/Mosquitoes-Prevent-and-Protect>.

Another Successful Delray Affair

A GREAT BIG THANKYOU for all the time and effort you put into making this year's Delray Affair fund-raiser another success, raising $4,534 net for our club. Even though we were thrown a curve ball of having our location changed several times, we ended up with a really sweet location at 4th & Atlantic.

Kudos to Rich Pollack for taking the chairmanship of this event and all the extra effort he put in. As usual, we had visits of some very generous people during the three days and they all had something positive to say about the Kiwanis organization. We even had a $100 bill donated without taking a water or soda.

Thinking of all you accomplished both in preparation for, and the hours worked over those three days, it makes one proud to be a member of our club. You are a very special group of people. Again, thank you all for supporting this major fund raiser.

Here are some pics from the event:

Executive Perspective

by Stan D. Soderstrom, Executive Director of Kiwanis and the Kiwanis Children’s Fund.

If you’re reading this, I hope it’s because a member of your community’s Kiwanis club handed it to you and invited you to learn more about Kiwanis. If so, I’d like to take a few moments to tell you about us.

First, the basics: We are a 107-year-old organization with clubs in almost 90 nations and territories around the world. Our focus is children — because happy, healthy children are an important part of creating stronger communities everywhere.

Perhaps our greatest contribution to communities has been our youth leadership programs. In high schools, for example, Key Clubs have developed youth leadership skills in millions of students since 1925. I know, because Key Club was my first taste of leadership — and my chance to make a difference in my school and in my home city of Amarillo, Texas.

All along, Kiwanis club members were behind my growth and development. That’s a crucial part of Kiwanis membership: the opportunity to serve as advisors and mentors. For me, Kiwanians weren’t just early influences — they were the reason I joined a Kiwanis club as an adult.

The man who extended that invitation to me was a Dallas Kiwanian named Art Swanberg. Art told me that we’re all about trying to “have a little fun while we do a lot of good.” Sometimes, he acknowledged, we do a little good and have a lot of fun — but either way, members make good things happen while working with their neighbors in the community.

This brings me to you. If you want to make a positive impact in your community and get to know more of the people who live there, a Kiwanis club just might be right for you. On the other hand, your first response might be to ask, “What’s in it for me?” In that case, I have to be honest: Kiwanis might not be a good match for you. Our members want to make their communities better — and they tend not to worry about contributing time, talent and treasure. More important, they realize that the best way to invest in our future is to invest in our youth.

What I can’t tell you is what your Kiwanis club experience will be like. Every Kiwanis club is different. Every club chooses its own service activities, where to spend its money and with whom to partner. And every club can be as large or as small as it chooses. Some clubs have hundreds of members, and some have fewer than a couple dozen. Some meet weekly, some meet monthly, and some meet online.

And when clubs raise money from the community, it’s to support club service activities — we don’t expect the community to pay for the cost of membership. Members pay annual dues to Kiwanis International, which cover the club’s and organization’s administrative expenses, a magazine subscription and liability insurance for you and your club.

Those are some of the basics about who we are and what we do. The next step is yours. I encourage you to visit a Kiwanis club meeting. Better yet, volunteer at a Kiwanis service project. That’s the best way to get a real taste of the service, fellowship and community impact that Kiwanis is all about.
